Аннотация

Many people in the social environment forget what life is. Chasing imposed purposes and forgetting what is really important in this World. Over time, these people look around and realize that all they were doing was a waste of time, energy and effort. Because of this, lose meaning in life, thinking that lived their and something to start again does not make sense. In this story, I'll tell you what meaning lies in such simple things as: love, friendship and service to others.

When life loses its meaning

What is the meaning of life for me?

What is the meaning of life? For this recognition, wealth, money, for another – creativity, self-improvement, love of the profession and the comfort of home.

For every person there is a certain sense of life. Someone committed to education and have career success; the other tends to create a big family and have the comfort of home. We can't say that someone is wrong in choosing the purpose of its existence. Perhaps it depends on the child's upbringing from birth, what life values he has been vaccinated, great importance is the example of parents.

In my opinion, it is important for everyone to have a purpose, and the meaning of life, it means that the man lives not in vain, it doesn't exist, not live, namely living. My meaning of life is self-improvement, because it is a constant discovery of something new, constant development, which means that I do not stand in place, not degrade, I constantly make new discoveries.

The value of life to each of us.

In today's world people have very different values, people tend very different, all want to have great achievements and means of influence on other people, few people cares about other people, few people does good things. They have a lot of cases, they are always busy and always in a hurry. The society has lost moral values, people began to care only their problems, they are only interested in themselves and their future. In a sense, people are selfish. Sorry, what is the expression "love your neighbor as you love yourself" was not important. Unfortunately, few people who are concerned about the fate of others, able to pay attention to the person in need, or animal suffering from hunger. People are all busy with their daily chores and live by the principle "my hut on the edge, I know nothing", but as life shows, it is only until such time as the trouble does not begin to touch them. It is a pity that people never think about the future, they cannot predict events that will happen to them. So people are indifferent and cruel. We must never forget that in any situation, we must first be human. Maybe the purpose of life is to help those who really need it? Perhaps life must be lived so that you may remember only the good things?
