Illustrated booklet about the unique silks of red eri, muga and tassar. Useful to masters and sellers of products from this silk when working with customers.

Introduction

The golden silks discussed in this book differ in color, value, and, accordingly, in price from other silks. But, for buyers who are unaware of the existence of these rare types of silk, they may look like beautifully dyed ordinary silk.

In order to explain the value of the product, the seller will have to explain that the end product is made of valuable and expensive silk that takes a lot of time and effort to produce. You can simplify your task by giving the buyer the opportunity to familiarize themselves with the product. The information in the booklet is short, but voluminous, in simple language, supported by beautiful illustrations. Reading the text takes a couple of minutes.

I hope this little booklet will greatly facilitate your work.
