Аннотация

A family moves into a new home. The disabled daughter, Kayleigh, is kept awake at nights by noises from under the tree in their garden. She investigates one night and is amazed at what she finds. She makes strange new friends and is soon partying with them at night too. Even when tragedy strikes a friend the happiness cannot end and ultimately a miracle occurs which makes Kayleigh able to walk. “The Tickle Tree” was inspired by a tree in a park where we take our daughters to play. The story has been written in rhyme and it encourages us to always look for the magic in life as children and to remember to look for the magic in life as adults. It also demonstrates how powerful happiness can be in that a young disabled girl experiences a miracle and is able to walk for the first time.

The Tickle Tree

A young family moved into their new home
They had a daughter they called Kayleigh
She liked the house and loved the gnome
At the bottom of the garden under the tree.

The gnome was just a statue and couldn't really speak
But Kayleigh pretended it could and called it No-Me
Sometimes Kayleigh thought its face had moved a tweak
But believed it was really the shadow of the tree.

Now Kayleigh was in a wheelchair because she couldn't walk
But she did her best to be happy despite her difficulty
At school she couldn't find friends with whom to laugh or talk
Because she was new and they could not accept her disability

When Kayleigh was tucked up tight in bed at night
She often thought she heard a laugh – or a giggle
But peering outside after turning off the light
There was nothing that moved or made a wiggle
